Development of BPI's Emergency Response Plan

FOREWORD

Colleagues, this emergency response plan (ERP) is designed to provide comprehensive, practical, and structured guidance for responding to Emergencies in an efficient and effective manner. The ERP is not to be seen as independent from other emergency response documents within the Company. Rather, it embraces critical more detailed business unit plans, and creates a mechanism for integration and collaboration among all the Company's response teams.

This ERP contains the measures and protocols for managing emergencies from within, for communicating with external agencies and for documenting incidents and events to meet specific corporate and regulatory requirements.

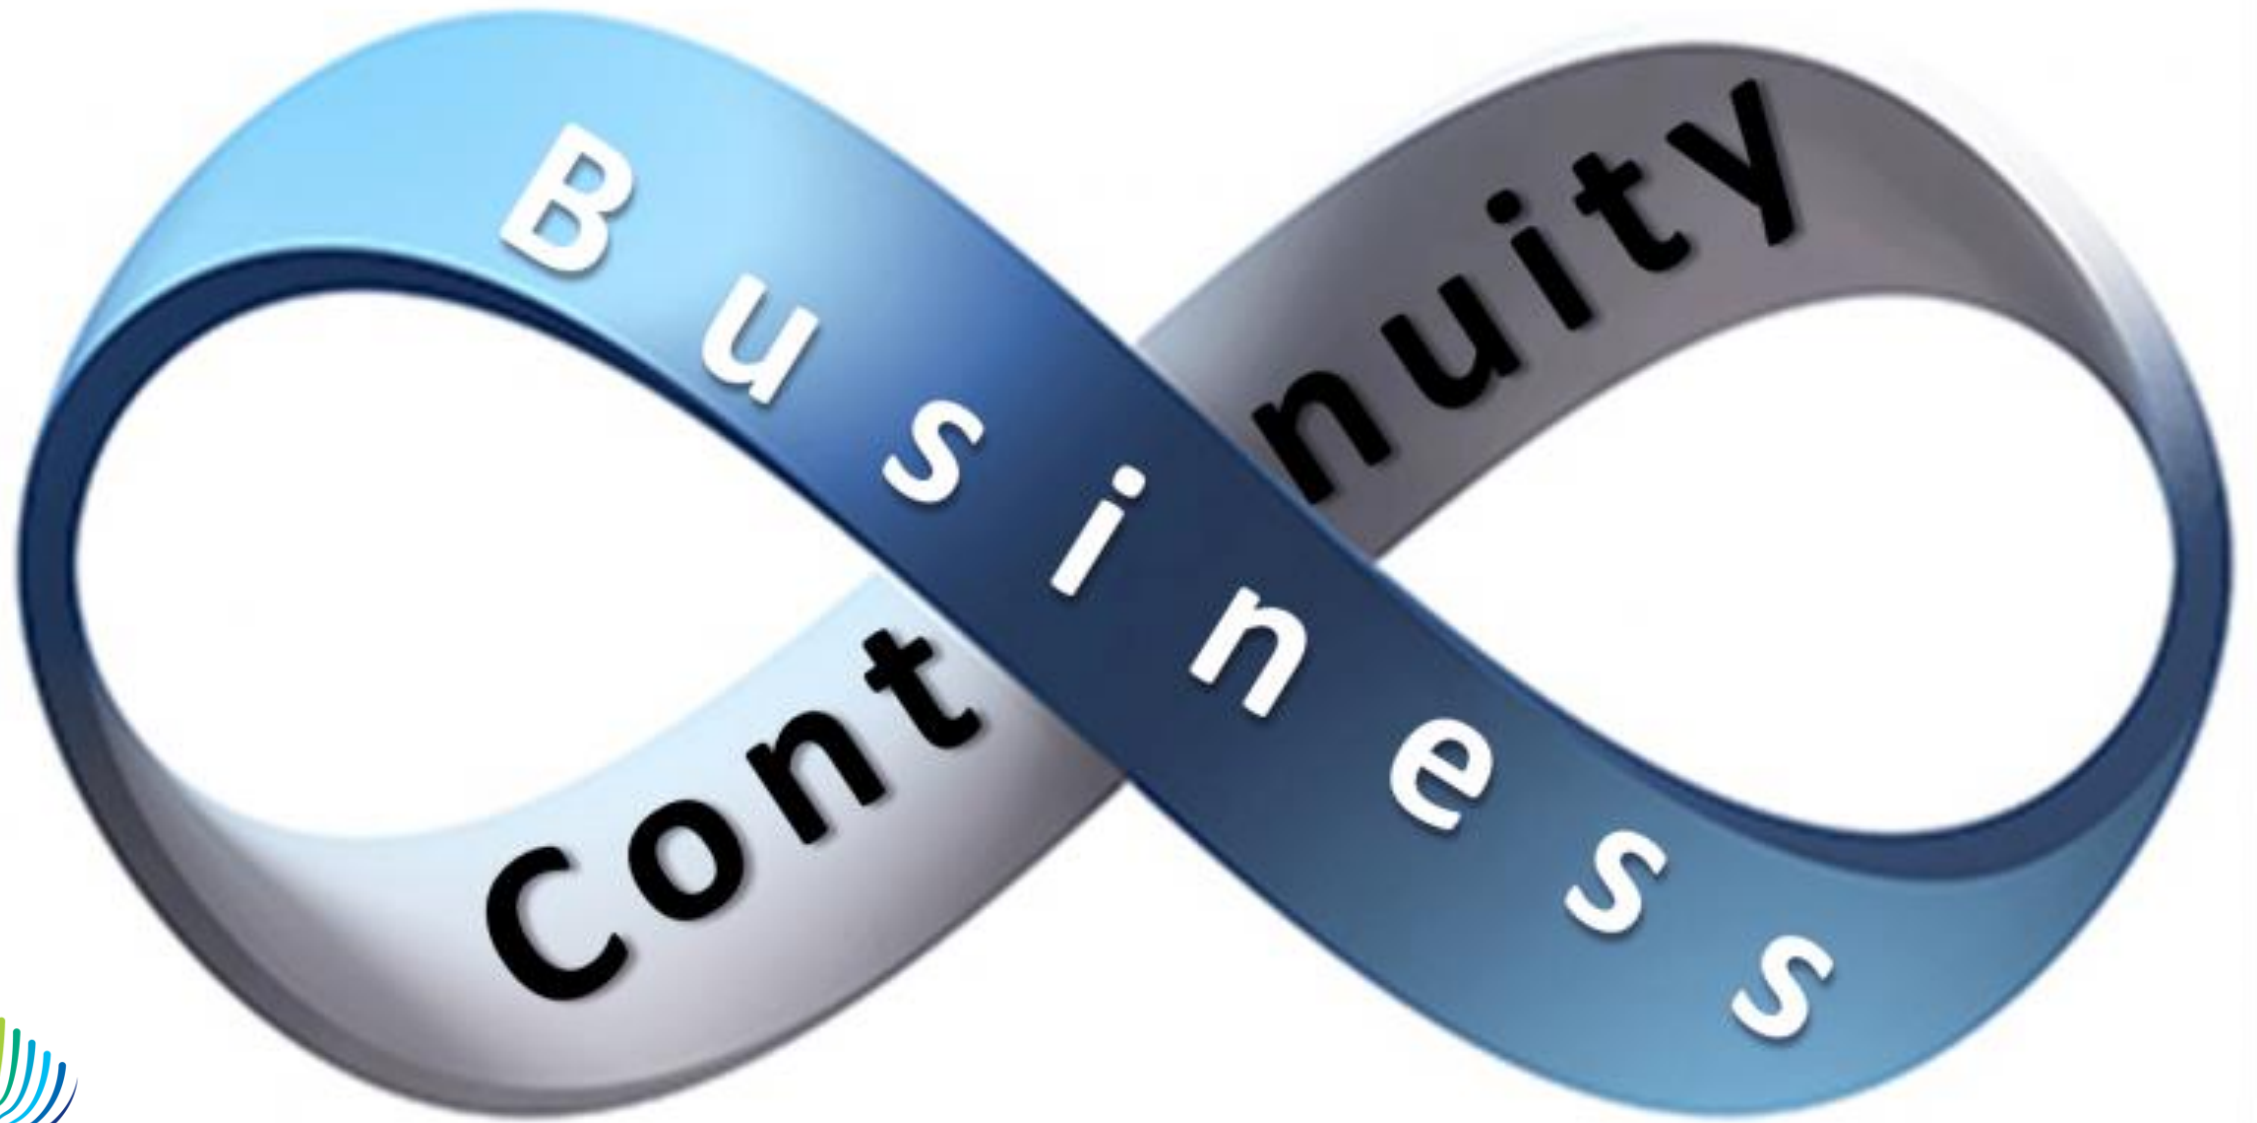

The Divisional Manager, Operations, is assigned as the Document Manager, with the responsibility of overseeing updates and revisions to this document. Please refer to the section "Version Change Control" for more information on how this process will be managed.

I fully expect that there will be full communication of this plan throughout the organization and that the requisite time will be allocated for training and drills to ensure that we are fully prepared for any emergency event.

Massive cruise transfer through Bridgetown Port

“When asked in March what would be our stance to people who were helpless and voiceless, this country made a determination . . . We said to the people who were stranded on cruise ships and when they had nowhere to turn to and no one to turn to, and when they showed up and showed us all the ports that said ‘no entry’, we said ‘come’.

“We know better, we are not that kind of person. We put arrangements in place to guarantee their safety but to guarantee the safety equally of our citizens. And over the course of the last few months, I am happy to lead a nation that has been responsible for the repatriation of more than 21,000 human beings from cruise ships.”
