Expansion of Kingston's Container Terminal in Jamaica

According to the Inter-American Investment Corporation (IIC), acting on behalf of the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB) Group, the project aims at optimizing and expanding Kingston's container terminal capacity in Jamaica, as the port must stay competitive to handle larger ships now passing through the expanded Panama Canal. The upgraded terminal will soon manage increased vessel volume, expanding capacity from 2.8 to 3.2 million TEUs per year within the next six years. The expansion of the container terminal will contribute to strengthen Jamaica's relevancy in global trade and foster private sector activity and foreign direct investment. The ICC has signed a US$265 million financing package with Kingston Freeport Terminal Limited. For further information, click here.

Mexico Climbed Seven Places in Port Infrastructure

During the opening of the Annual Congress of the Mexican Association of Shipping Agents, A.C. (AMANAC), held in Cancun, Quintana Roo, Guillermo Ruiz de Teresa, General Coordinator of Ports and Merchant Marine of Mexico, reported that according to statistics from the World Economic Forum, Mexico went from place 64 to 57 in Port Infrastructure in recent years. He highlighted the contribution of the port sector to the automotive industry, stressing that by 2020, Mexico will be the second largest exporter of vehicles as they will be able to manufacture 5 million units and 3.4 million will be exported. Currently Mexico produces 3.4 million vehicles and exports 2.2 million, of which the 50 percent go out from any Mexican port. For more information, click here.

Peruvian Coast: One of the Most Productive Seas in the World for its Natural Wealth

As part of the activities commemorating the Day of the Sea and Peruvian Fishing Wealth, the National Port Authority (APN) of Peru promoted that the country has been privileged with a coastline of 3,000 kilometers (1,865 miles) and it is rated as one of the most productive seas in the world for its nutrient richness, the Peruvian Humboldt Current and its tropical latitudinal position, which allows high solar radiation and therefore a large concentration of species. The APN also stressed the importance of the seas in daily lives, as well as the relevance of raising awareness about marine-coastal ecosystem conservation, which provides food, supplies oxygen and regulates climate, and is a work source for activities including fishing, tourism, and transportation, among others. ## Right Ship and AUSMEPA: Top 10 Finalists for the Google Impact Challenge

The Australian Marine Environment Protection Association (AUSMEPA), in partnership with Right Ship, who is a CIP Associate Member, have been selected as one of the top 10 finalists for the 2016 Australian Google Impact Challenge. The Google Impact Challenge supports not-for-profit innovators using technology to tackle the world's biggest social challenges. AUSMEPA's project consists on the development of a Port Emissions Portal which will enable ports and their stakeholders to measure the air quality and changing air patterns in their port environs. Through satellite tracking and a big-data approach, the Portal empowers all stakeholders - including governments, the shipping sector, and the general public - by providing them with real and transparent information on shipping emissions in their local environs.
